

Finding Your Story

A fun storytelling workshop for students, focused on self-expression and intergenerational connection!

What to expect:

- A fun, interactive, and nonjudgemental atmosphere.
- An exploration of the ways in which personal storytelling can help kids develop self-confidence, express themselves, connect with peers, and learn about the lives of older family and community members.
- Short discussion/writing prompts designed to bring out the story in everyone.

No writing or storytelling experience needed.

This workshop will be led by Jennifer Shulman. She has worked in research and writing for over 30 years and is the founder of Jeneration Stories, a company that helps people turn their personal stories into self-published books.

The logo for Jeneration Stories, featuring the letters 'JS' in a large, stylized, red cursive font. Below the initials, the words 'Jeneration Stories' are written in a smaller, black, sans-serif font, and 'By Jennifer Shulman' is written in an even smaller font at the bottom. The entire logo is enclosed in a red rectangular border.
